Nonfiction Call Numbers

Nonfiction books have their own section of the library. They will not be found with picture books or story books. Nonfiction books are about all different subjects, such as plants, outer space, people, and machines. Folktales, fairy tales, and poetry are all considered nonfiction.

A nonfiction book has an "address" on its spine that helps you find it on the bookshelf. It is easy to tell the difference between a fiction and a nonfiction book because the nonfiction book has numbers as well as letters (fiction books just have letters). These numbers and letters make up its call number.

The book titled The Book of Seashells by Amy Shore has a call number of:
